By HOWARD SIEPEN TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO BERLIN-The majority of the German people today firmly believe that they are innocent of causing the war, to at least 80 per cent, and therefore emphatically reject the assertion of Germany's complete guilt or greater guilt. The literature published in the 10 years which have elapsed since 1918 has strengthened them in their attitude. Indeed, the fact that some guilt on Germany's part is admitted at all,

is a remarkable development, be-cause at the beginning of the war and right through it the German people were thoroughly convinced sides by France because it wanted Alsace-Lorraine and revenge for its by England because it was jealous of German prosperity and by Russia because it was moved by greed for and 260 retailers spread through-

OTTAWA—Who owns' the water powers on navigable rivers, Province or the Dominion? The Province, pro-

that the issue remains nearly as confused as before and will likely be appealed to the Privy Council in London before it can be straightened

Affected by Special Grants

Broadly speaking, the court, after calling attention to the difficulty, in-deed the impracticability of giving precise and categorical answers to most of the questions submitted, does find that the title of the Province to use the beds of navigable rivers is subject to the public right of navigation except in so far as some special right to use the waters of such rivers for other purposes may have been vested in the Province, at confederation or by subsequent Dominion legislation.

The court cannot answer "yes or no" to the question whether the Dominion has the power for navigation purposes to occupy the beds of pro-vincial navigable rivers without the consent of the Province or without compensation.

Difficult to Define

The court decides, furthermore, that in the absence of a precise statement as to the character of the works or the authority under which they were executed, it is impossible the parties to water powers made available by reason of extensions, enlargements or replacement of works for the improvement of navi-gation by the Dominion authority. In short, the findings leave such vital questions as ownership of water power and other advantages as may accrue from the St. Lawrenge water-way project unanswered and are a source of disappointment as those

Ending Historic Dispute BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR ROME-Cardinal Gasparri's official announcement of the conclusion of a concordat between the Vatican and the Italian Government on Feb. 7 gave no details of the accord and the short statement, which he read to the diplomatic representatives, was purposely drafted in vague terms, so that the diplomats are still unaware of the contents of the accord. Great secrecy is still maintained both at the Vatican and in Italian quarters as to the contents of the agreement. Al. reports as to the terms are based on rumors current in well-informed quarters. Although everybody in Rome is talking of the solution of the Roman question, the Fascisi press still maintains absolute silence and even the Osservatore, Romano and even the Osservatore, Romano the official organ of the Vatican, has not a line on the subject. At the official signing of the agreement on Feb. 11, both Signor Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri are expected to make speeches. The Pontiff, it is believed, will officially announce the political reconciliation with the Italian Government to the Cardinals at a special meeting of the Sacred College on the same day, and on the following day the text of the diplomatic instruments is to be made diplomatic instruments is to be made

Judgment on the concordat must await publication of the instruments, but it may be stated that Signor Mussolini has earned the title of the "Greatest Italian Statesman" the "Greatest Italian Statesman" which Francesco Crispi had reserved to the man who would bring about reconciliation between the King of Italy and the Pope. For Italy, the solution of the Roman question is an event of immense political importance, which will consolidate on a still firmer basis the Fascist régime. Old Claims Renounced

The restoration of the Pope's temporal power over the former papal states indeed could only be the of the disruption of the ent Italian state. The Italian state, however, today is so firmly estab-lished that this possibility is outside discussion and the Pope there-fore decided it would be more convenient to renounce definitely his former claims over the former papal states in favor of Italy, in return for cession by Italy of a "tiny state" in which he could exercise sovereign

Moreover, the Pope seems to have solini was ready to make concessions, which were previously refused by the Liberal Italian Government and which would at the same time be acceptable to the majority of the Italian people. Events will shortly show whether the Roman Catholic Church will gain or lose by the transaction.

Mr. Smoot was himself vice-chairman of the joint congressional committee on reorganization of the executive departments in 1924.

Mr. Hoover stated, as long ago'as the Congressional inquiry, that he had experience in reorganizing many big industries: that the United States Government, in its executive func-tions, needed reorganization as or more, than any of these companies: and that such a shakeup of individual departments and inertia. He is reported to see three major benefits to be derived from such reorganization: the saving of millions of dollars by simplifying activities; ble to the industries affected by such to be gained by the Chief Executive and the Cabinet.

It is believed by those close to Mr. Hoover that, before his term is over, one or more new Cabinet officers co-ordinated and over-lapping functions will be brought together for the first time. He has stated that the guiding policy for such administrative re-organization would be to tions under single leadership. He believes enough fluidity should be left to allow the President to assign new functions, as he sees fit.

Two of the major alterations which Mr. Hoover has urged are the formation of an aviation bureau and the grouping of all construction activito prevent unemployment

Selected as Best Place for Institute

BY CABLE FROM MONITOR BURRAU PARIS-Much interest is aroused ere by the presence of His Eminence Tai Hsu, president of the Chinese Buddhist Union, whose avowed purpose is to find a place best adapted to founding an international Buddhist Institute.

A committee of savants and philosophers has been formed to favor this initiative, which is understood to have the approval here of offi-cial circles. It is not known yet whether Paris will be selected for this institute, which will have a purely religious character, and which is destined to become a center of locumentation of a doctrine which has many millions of adherents. Tai Hsu is expected to continue his tour of Europe and even to visit the United States before arriving at a final decision.

This year more than 150 manufacturers of aircraft and aviation motors or accessories are represented in the exhibits at the Grand Central Palace. There are 33 manufacturers of airplanes, and their craft are sleek, balanced, dynamic-looking "planes" with broadcloth lined cabins and comfortable upholstered chairs. The aviation enthusiast who is inclined to speed may study the Cor-sair seaplane of the type in which United States Navy aviators have set both speed and altitude records. Or he may contemplate the one foreign exhibit, a large Savoia Marchetti of the type used by the Italian flyers in their nonstop record flight from Europe to South America. This flying boat, with its engine cradled beneath the upper wing and its four-blade propeller of "pusher" rather than the conventional tractor mounting, is to be manufactured in the United States by the American Aeronautical Corporation.

Air liners that cruise at from 110 to 125 miles an hour are on the floor. There are service and training machines and some few designed especially for mail and express service. Speech From Throne Advises Extension of Air Mail and Rail Systems

OTTAWA, Ont. — Emphasis was placed upon communications and transportation in the speech from the throne delivered by Viscount Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, in opening the third session of the Sixteenth Parliament Sixteenth Parliament.

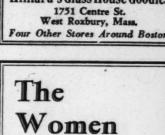

Attention was called to the inauguration last year of the Canadian National steamship service between Canada and Bermuda and the West Indies which is already proving its worth to the net earnings of the railways which have exceeded those of any previous year.

The early completion of the Hudson Bay Railway was advocated and the necessity shown for building many more branch lines to meet the rapid development of western and northern Canada, and for extension and development of air-mail services. To provide for further progress, Parliament will be asked to authorize a branch line program for the Canadian National management and the acquisition of certain railways in eastern and western Canada, which will constitute potentially important feeders of that system.

Renewed promises are given to facilitate the return of control of the natural reserves to the four Western Provinces. The multi-lat-eral treaty for the renunciation of war, which was signed on behalf of war, which was signed on benair or Canada last August will be submitted to Parliament for approval, as will also a Convention between the United States and Canada providing for the preservation of the scenic value of Niagara Falls.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has started its $70,000,000 program in Philadelphia to run through this year, according to Charles W. Garrett, assistant vice-president in charge of employees' relations. This includes electrification, on which $100,000,000 will ultimately be spent, and the construction of a new station and improvements in South Philadelphia. The road's program, he said, provides about 45 per cent in labor costs and the balance for materials.

Dr. Hollis Godfrey, president of the Engineering Economics Foundation of Boston, in discussing the nerchant's problem of maintaining a constant growth in his business, stressed the importance of educating the adult consumer to a greater capacity for consumption. Two gold medals were presented by the association for service in improvng the art of retailing. The recipients were Carlos B. Clark of the J. L. Hudson Company of Detroit, and Lew Hahn, president of the Hahn Department Stores, Inc., of New York.

NEW YORK (A)-The National Retail Dry Goods Association has elected Alfred B. Koch of Toledo, O., president; F. E. Eastman, Port-land, Me., vice-president for New England; Bernard F. Gimbel, New York, vice-president for middle Atlantic states, and Channing E. Sweitze was re-elected managing director and treasurer.

AIR MAIL TERMINALS GAIN FASTER SERVICE

WASHINGTON - Speeding up of air mail movements to all parts of the United States, but particularly to the congested terminals of New York, Chicago and Salt Lake City, has been effected by placing railway mail service crews in charge of nine chief airport mail terminals, according to Earl B. Wadsworth, superintendent of contract airmails

The nine principal air mail terminals affected by the order are: Hadley Field, N. J., the New York end of the transcontinental route; Cleveland, Chicago, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Salt Lake City, Oakland, Calif.; Fort Worth, Tex.; New Orleans, La., and Atlanta, Ga. Each are important junction points on the air mail network.

The books will represent a complete revision of many existing texts taught in the schools. They are regarded as especially significant because war and political affairs are strikingly minimized and world peace strongly emphasized.

The author is Dr. Harold Rugg, professor of education at Teachers' College and connected with Lincoln Experimental School of the college. Seven years ago he conceived and started his scheme of scrapping the separate subjects of history, geography, civics, economics, sociology and the like, and molding them into one course and calling it "Social Science" in which mere facts are stressed. Mechanical and industrial conquests are told in sweeping gestures, and much material, especially in the way of current opinion, has been injected for the first time in school texts.

Dr. Rugg has operated a scientific research institute as well as a "text-book factory." He has sold the books below cost, operating on financial aid from Teachers' College. Income from the sale of the books, which has amounted to $300,000, has gone into printing and research. The sum of 50,000 has gone for collection of materials alone, much of which has been out of the realm of textbooks

Salaries aggregating $100,000 have been spent by Dr. Rugg to persons collecting material for research, for preparing experimental editions and for office expense. More than $40,000 was spent for scientific research. The original texts have been scrapped twice at a great cost. A loss of 6000 plates and 3000 "cuts" was incurred in order to perfect the texts.

Associates of Dr. Rugg have included his brother, Dr. Earl Rugg, head of the department of education at State College, Colorado; Dr. John A. Hockett, University of California; Dr. Emma Schweppe, State Normal School, New Jersey; Dr. Helen Lynd, author and writer; Dr. John Washburne, Syracuse University; Dr. C. O. Mathews, Ohio Wesleyan University; Dr. Lawrence Shaffer, Carnegie Institute of Technology; Dr. Benjamin Showalter, Mrs. Frances Youtz, James Mendenhall, Mrs. E G. Woods and Mrs. F. M. Foster. No peace organizations have in any way been connected with the plan and Dr. Rugg's work has been strictly non-commercial. Not a line of commercial advertising was used to sell the 600,000 volumes.

When Persimmons Are Delicious

RIENTAL persimmons are now available to the American housekeepers. They are considerably larger than large plums, with a yellowish skin that changes just enough to drive out the air, then to bright red when the fruit is ma-ture. The flesh is sweet, crisp and meaty and has a most delicious flavor. Some varieties still have, while they are hard, the astringent quality for which the persimmon native to the United States is soften. Other varieties are quite non-and repeat until the leather is of a astringent and may be eaten out of thickness to handle easily. This may hand and enjoyed while they are still

Many people, however, who have been using this fruit that is comparatively new to our markets do t know how delicious it may be. Many people in localities quainted with its astringent qualities simmons are unfit to eat before they have been touched by frost, or frozen.

Although this statement has been corrected by everyone who has really studied the subject, many of the best fruits are being lost each year throughout the regions where the persimmon grows, simply because they ripen and fall before frost—before the time when they are supposed to be edible. And the truth of the matter is that the delightful flavor of the ripe persimmon is harmed by frost and freezing like that of any other fruit

Drying the Fruit

When persimmons are dried, they are so sweet, so rich in sugar and have such a unique flavor that one who has never eaten them before immediately concludes that they have been crystallized. The seedless Japkets are especially fine when treated this way. To get the most satisfactory results, the fruit should be peeled be-served like dates which it resembles in appearance and flavor.

Carol of Service

Up, my neighbour, come away, See the work for us to-day, The hands to help, the mouths to feed, The sights to see, the books to read:

Up and get us gone, to help the world along, Up and get us gone, my neighbour.

Up, my neighbour, see the plough For our hands lies waiting now; Grasp well the stilt, yoke up the team, Stride out to meet the morning beam:

Up, my neighbour, see the land Ready for the sower's hand; The plough has made an even tilth, The furrows wait the golden spilth:

Up, my neighbour, now the corn Ripens at the harvest morn; Then let it to our sickle yield, And pile with sheaves the golden field:

Up, my neighbour, let us pray, Thank our Maker every day, Who gave us work our strength to test And made us proud to do our best.

swarmed over the country thriving on the poverty of an exhausted The German National Party wished to move a bill in Parliament recently charging any German who publicly accused the Reich of any guilt in the outbreak of the war with having committed high treason. This suggestion was treated with scorn by the other parties and never was discussed. The Germans emphasize they want the truth to be known about the commencement of the war. And that is where the question rests at present.

Proportion of Women to Men in Industry Changed Little in 10 Years

SPECIAL PROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON - The tendency for British home trade to increase at the ALBERT JACKSON expense of foreign is shown by the fact that for every £100 worth of home-made goods sold in Britain £44 worth was shipped to foreign markets in 1907, compared with £37 worth 17 years later. This compares with £12 worth in the United States in similar circumstances at present On this point the figures appear to leave little room for dispute. In 1907, 24.3 per cent of those employed in British industries were women. In 1924 the proportion was 24.5. Another change which has occurred concerns the relative numbers of those engaged in different classes of work. In 1907, of those engaged in industry 8 per cent were classified as belonging to "administrative, technical and clerical" grades. In 1924 the proportion was 11% per cent. The change in this case is attributed partly to the development of marketing activities.

INTERNATIONAL BALKLINE BIL LIARDS CHAMPIONSHIP STANDING

NEW YORK-Edouard Horemans present champion, and Erich Hagen lacher, champion of Germany, were the winners Thursday in the sixth and venth matches of the International 18.2 balkline billiards championship series at the Level Club. The Belgian defeated Felix Grange, champion of France, in the afternoon, 400 to 333 in 21 innings, while Hagenlacher, with the aid of the high run of the tourna-the aid of the high run of the tournament, 207, scored over Jacob Schaefer, one of the two Americans in the tourney, 400 to 361, in 17 innings.

This afternoon Welker Cochran, the other American, will engage Grange, while the evening game will bring Kinrey Matsuyama, of Japan, the unbeaten leader, against Hagenlacher.

Neither of the afternoon contenders was in particularly exod control but vas in particularly good control, but loremans, by his ability to get out 'f his difficulties through his greater pastery of masse shots and his occaional runs of perfect line nursing ad the advantage all the way through Grange appeared heavy handed in his troking, and his attempts at masse. occasionally successful, were by comparison with the deft

Horemans went into the lead soon after the start with a run of 86, his after the start with a run of 86, his best of the game, mostly on close nursing along the cushion at the foot of the table. He broke once but recovered the position a few caroms later, only to slip on another break about 20 strokes further on. Shorter runs brought him to 184 at the end of the fifth, to 54 for Grange, and this remained his advantage for the greater part of the game. Only when Grange made his run, also of .86, in the eleventh, was there any narrow-

69 when the German made the long stand. Later, when Hagenlacher was apparently sure of victory, the young Chicago star began another series of similar runs, and only the steadying rally of the German at the crisis saved

OTTAWA, Ont,-The Ottawa Senaors strengthened by the return of Nighbor after an absence of some weeks, won their second National Hockey League game since Dec. 8 here on Thursday night when they doubled the score on the world's champion New York Rangers and on the play deserved their 2-to-1 margin. Not only did Nighbor increase the defensive play of the locals by his constant and effective poke checking, but his pres-ence encouraged his team mates to their best efforts in the last six weeks. They were able to hold their own in the matter of speed with the visitors, while the defense was ably backed up by some brilliant work by Connell in There was no scoring in the first period although both custodians were called upon to make a number of difficult saves, but in the second the Senators scored twice on combination plays. Smith and Finnigan combined for the first, the latter scoring, and then Godin gave Touhey a pass for the second goal, near the end of the period. Thompson and Frank Boucher combined for the visitors' only goal five minutes after the start of the third period, but after that the locals defense turned aside the strenuous efforts of the champions to score tion play with Simpson, Broadbent and Burch in the play, accounting for a score. This victory placed the locals in a tie with the Canadiens for first place in the Canadian division of the National Hockey League.

The earlier part of the first period left little to choose between the teams, but after two-thirds of the session was past, Simpson took the puck into the forward zone. Then Broadbent carried it on, and a fine pass across the goal mouth to Burch Broadbent carried it on, and a fine pass across the goal mouth to Burch gave the center the only goal. The Americans continued to press the attack in the second session, with Burch and Sheppard making most of the shots; but about the middle, the scene shifted to the American net, when a four-man attack by the visitors inaugurated a series of scrimmages which kept Worters busy.

The final session found the visitors trying everything possible to tie the score. Gottselig, Taylor and Wentworth all in turn made brilliant excursions, but the American defense held, though Conacher spent four minutes of the 20 off the lee in the penalty box. So the single goal settled the game in favor of the locals. The summary:

Performances in Newark Meet Classed Among Best Ever

NEWARK, N. J. (P) — Olympic heroes of two foreign countries came through in brilliant style Thursday in the Newark A. C. track and field games at the 113th Regiment Armory. Percy Williams of Canada in the sprint and Edvin Wide of Sweden in the two-mile run, defeated handicap fields in times that compare favorably with the best being done indoors anywhere. Wide, the Swedish schoolmaster, eclipsed even the time registered by the great Paavo Nurmi, his Finnish rival. On this same track a week ago, Wide covered two miles against a big handicap field in 9m. 17 1-5s. to set a new track record. Nurmi's time in a race run, under almost the same conditions was 9m. 19 3-5s.

Williams came up to highest expectations as the greatest sprinter now ex tant by giving away a one-yard handi-cap to all opponents in a 60-yard dash and plunging down the boards as though shot from a catapult to come within one-fifth of a second of the world's indoor record. When the fact that he was running without spikes for the first time in his career is considered his time of 61-5s, is all the more notable.

Go Out for Runs From the start of play it was obvious that Australia's tactics were for Bradman to go out for runs and the others to concentrate on keeping the others to concentrate on keeping the end up. Bradman and Oxenham raised Australia's hopes higher as the score mounted, and when 300 appeared a shout went up which was audible for miles. With four wickets in hand and only 49 runs required, a home victory seemed well in sight. Bradman's brilliant aggressiveness was taking much of the sting out of the bowling and his working to hit the ball as ing and his working to hit the ball as often as possible helped also to make his partner's task easier. Renewed Liquidation on - Large Scale Forces Prices Still Lower

NEW YORK (P)—Further unsettlement developed in today's stock market when banks called $40,000,000 in loans and sent the call money rate from 6 to 7 per cent. Early recoveries of 2 to 10 points in several of the high priced specialties were cut down, or wiped out, and a long list of issues sagged 1 to 8 points below yesterday's final quotations. Trading was only moderately heavy in volume.

Heavy calling of loans was believed to be for the account of out-of-town banks, and inspired by the Federal Reserve Board's recent criticism of the excessive use of credit for speculative purposes.

market worries, Fresh liquidation broke out when eall money rose to 9 per cent in the final hour. U. S. Steel dipped to 171½, comparing with last month's record of 192%. Radio sold at 346, contrasting with the forenoon price of 364. Safeway Stores and Wright Aero slumped.

with the forenoon price of 364. Safeway Stores and Wright Aero slumped 7 points, and a number of other important shares ruled materially under the previous close. The closing tone was weak. Total sales approximated 4,000,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges held firm, with sterling cables quoted slightly higher at 34.85 25-32.

The bond market today displayed a firmer tone in the early trading, following yesterday's sharp reaction. Trading, however, was on a small scale, and the improvement in some of the speculative convertibles followed a rally in the stock market.

Time money was in supply, although a shortage of call money was reported, and the rate was expected to go higher.

American International 5½s and International Telephone 4½s rallied, but Alleghany Corporation 5s sagged to 163 under selling pressure. The Anaconda issues failed to respond to the buoyancy in the stock. The 7s dropped 3 points on light trading, and 6s were firm at 105 on good demand. General Motors Acceptance 6s im-dropped 3 points on light trading, and 6s were firm at 105 on good demand. General Motors Acceptance 6s improved on the corporation's report of record sales for January. Dodge Brothers convertible 6s also improved. The rest of the industrial list was steady with little activity.

Rails moved irregularly lower, Fonda, Johnstown & Gloversville 4½s slumping 2 points. Utilities were quiet. Trading in the foreign list was practically at a standstill.

to Regain Status as Wheat Port

Shippers Urge Lowering of Dues That Drive Grain to Continental Centers

SPECIAL PROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON—Although the Port of London is growing fast from year to year, considerable surprise is being expressed at the discovery that the port warehouses recently contained not more than 5000 tons of wheat, although there is storage capacity for at least 10 times that amount. The decision to establish again the mardecision to establish again the market for wheat futures, which existed in London during the last century, has had to take this condition of affairs into consideration, with the result that trading will be in wheat which can be brought to London or which can be brought to London or is affoat, if the actual delivery of the grain is desired. When shipping is normal and wheat is always on the way, it is felt that no concern need be felt over such limited supplies in London, but the shipping business is frequently the scene of labor controversies and a prolonged suspension of shipping would create a serious situation.

The reason for such small supplies lies in the high port charges for unloading and storing. The cost of discharging grain into lighters is five times as much in the Port of London as at Antwerp, and more than twice as much as at Rotterdam than twice as much as at Rotterdam. Including storage charges and port dues, the cost of handling wheat in London, now amounts to approximately 5 per cent of the price of the wheat. In consequence, buyers of wheat for the smaller ports on the east coast of Britain find it cheaper to buy grain which has been shipped to Antwerp or Rotterdam and bring it on twerp or Rotterdam and bring it in by coastwise vessel, the longer distance being more than compensated by the lower port charges.

It is realized by shippers and by business men generally that port charges are an extremely important factor in world trade, and no better factor in world trade, and no better example could be cited than the diversion of business which ought nor-mally to come to London to continental ports. Such charges, like taxes, increase the cost of living and tend to increase as they are passed along from one process of manufacture or distribution to another Shipping leaders are calling atten-tion to the disability these charges lay on British shipping and their reduction is recognized as something to be urgently advocated.

A Word a Day

Calculate

The origin of this word tells us something of the means which the ancients employed in their arithmetical difficulties. Tiny pebbles were used by the early Latins in reckoning (calculus, "restable," a displaying of (calculus. "pebble," a diminutive of calx, "a small stone"), and the process was termed calculare, "to reckon."
Thus to calculate means to compute,

When a thing is calculated it is scientifically or mathematically computed or studied out; it shows evidence of careful work with complicated processes. The result, though possibly intricate, is definite and can be exceptioned.

IS THIS WHAT YOU THOUGHT IT WAS? in 1828. It had been said of him that

Why famous: He was an English scholar and writer who was ap-pointed head master of Rugby School

There is no good reason to put upon "calculated" the burden of such words as "likely" or "apt." When one sees the idea averaged that "a week the idea averaged that it is not a week the idea averaged that "a week the idea averaged that it is not a week that it is not a week the idea averaged that it is not a week sees the idea expressed that "of certain publications many may be calcepted as authority for pronunctation.—Ed to righteousness."

THE Judge's children have been reared close to nature, and their love for and appreciation of animals have been learned from parents who are true friends of animals. It was a hot midsummer morning. From the open window where Mrs. B—sat mending, she could see little three-year-old Jimmy playing contentedly on the shady lawn. Glancing out a few minutes later she noticed that five-year-old Bill had joined the baby, and he, too, seemed unusually pleased about something.

In a few minutes little Bill came hurrying in, calling, "Mother, oh, Mother, do come and see the beautiful big worm that Jimmy is playing with" playing with. Both Mr. and Mrs. B—— are interested participants in all of their children's joys, so she laid aside her mending and followed her jubi-lant son out to where the baby was cooling and talking happily as he toddled along.

"Look, Mother, see the big worm," called Bill gayly as he skipped and hopped around the baby.

As Mrs. B—— drew near she was somewhat startled and not a little surprised to see a large, attractively marked brown and gray snake crawling along, manifesting none of the qualities popularly attributed to snakes, and quite obviously enjoy-ing the attention of the boys. Restraining the impulse to snatch her children away, she stood a moment while the true significance of the situation dawned on her. No fear or loathing in the pure hearts of the two babies, only love, impartial love for all creatures. Soft, gentle expressions fell from the lips of the baby who trotted delightedly beside this new friend. No fear on the part of the snake, which moved along contentedly beside the child much as a dog might have Finally Mrs. B- took Jimmy by the hand and said gently, "Now it's time to tell your friend good-by, dear," and led two happy little boys toward the house. As for the "beautiful, big worm," it quietly slipped away toward the woods.

For a Greater Freedom of the Seas

THE only considerations which make the. cruiser bill, which has just received the approval of the United States Senate, anything more than a domestic question of passing concern are: (1) the provision encouraging the President to seek an international agreement further limiting naval armaments, in the event of which this program would be suspended in whole or in part; (2) the declaration in favor of a treaty defining more tangibly maritime law under conditions of war. After the long and tedious debate which extended over two sessions of the present Congress, the passage of this bill has happily left several matters quite definitely clarified, with the result that British and American naval policies are tending to converge rather than to conflict; and the atmosphere of discord, which has somewhat marred Anglo-American relations ever since the abortive conference of 1927, is gradually

To follow the course which the American cruiser bill was forced to take from the time it was originally introduced in the spring of 1927 to the present moment of its enactment is to understand that in no sense does it constitute a step toward competitive naval building with Great Britain or with any other country. When the United States public and the United States Congress repudiated the measure tentatively put forward in 1927 for twenty-five cruisers. thirty-two submarines, nine destroyer leaders and five aircraft carriers, and substituted for this program a bill calling for but fifteen cruisers and one aircraft carrier, they served notice that the United States Navy was not designed to be an instrument of aggressive power seeking to dominate the seas.

The message with which President Coolidge submitted the greatly revised measure to Congress, and the Congressional discussion which preceded its enactment, made it clear that the objects of the American naval policy are focused upon the need of protecting American commerce and outlying possessions, and that the American Navy is viewed only as an instrument of defensive purpose. It has been highly conducive to Anglo-American friendship that the British press has been so ready to recognize that this intent alone underlies the present cruiser bill.

It is indeed becoming increasingly apparent that the commercial interests of Britain and the United States are fundamentally alike and that, therefore, British and American naval policy is fundamentally a common one. The Pact of Paris offers the key to a new relationship between these two great maritime powers, for the Pact of Paris makes resort to war an affront to all nations and confines the use of force to the maintenance of peace. A nation which has violated the Pact of Paris has by that act menaced the peace of the world and equally has menaced the freedom of the seas. Against any violator of the Pact of Paris the United States and Great Britain are jointly concerned. Such a conception of world peace makes the freedom of the seas a cause of unity and not a source of conflict between the United States and Great Britain. Such a conception must ultimately dictate their relations.

Icelandic Aspirations

FEW years ago the world could count A among its standing causes of trouble the claims of a number of small nations to independence. Today, thanks to the elimination of the main centers of imperialism, this disturbing element has been diminished considerably. and no doubt a few years hence the struggle of a people for independence will differ only in degree from the struggle of a township for local self-government. There are still dissatisfied nations, however, and among them may be included Iceland, which shows a growing discontent with its allegiance to the Danish crown. Iceland's trouble, it would seem, will be settled, not with valiant deeds of arms, stirring saga and skaldic song, but by the prosaic, though far more effective, polling booth. Possibly Iceland might have remained for some time to come still wrapped in its romantic seclusion, despite the work of metallurgists bent on turning its barren peaks to profitable account, had it not been for the sudden rise of air travel. In an able study in the current number of Foreign Affairs, Vilhjalmur Stefánsson, who is partial to maps with their center not at New York, Paris or London, but at the north pole, has no difficulty in showing that the airplanist who seeks the shortest cut from Chicago to Moscow, San Francisco to Paris, or Vancouver to Berlin, will inevitably stop to refuel and stretch his legs in Iceland. In short, Iceland, a few years hence, may be expected to find herself a great way-station for grand trunk air routes of the North and no longer a deserted outpost on the fringe of humanity. Should all this have happened by 1940, when Iceland will hold a referendum on her present status of conditional sovereignty-owing allegiance to Denmark's King and being represented in foreign affairs by the Danish Foreign Minister-it is impossible to foresee how it will affect political opinion. In any event, Icelanders, who have not really enjoyed complete independence since 1262, when they swore allegiance to King Hakon Hakonarson or Norway, may find that, for a people so comparatively isolated, an easy association with a well-disposed neighbor may afford more satisfaction than the prestige of full but lonely independence.

A Prosecutor Testifies

THOSE who may be inclined to regard complacently the social conditions which have sprung up as a result of continued violation of the prohibition law will perhaps somewhat less calmly contemplate the more striking picture portrayed by Frederick H. Tarr, United States Attorney for the district embracing Boston and vicinity. He declared recently, in an address delivered before a women's club, that the question of law observance "transcends by a thousand times the importance of any other, be it moral, social, financial or political."

It would hardly be possible to state the matter more forcibly or convincingly. Uttered by one in a position to appraise conditions correctly and without emotion or prejudice, the call to all law-abiding citizens of state and nation comes with the force of a command to enlist in a determined movement to arouse the people everywhere to a realization of the need which exists and a proper concept of their individual and collective responsibilities. Mr. Tarr is quoted as having declared that "if the law cannot be enforced and will not be repealed, then we are in anarchy and our institutions are a failure." To many, no doubt, this statement will appear somewhat extravagant. But is it that? Conditions approaching anarchy are known to exist in those localities where organized gangs of bootleggers and rumrunners wage their battles for supremacy, terrorizing and intimidating both prosecutors and prosecuting witnesses. Is there any possible alternative when the choice between enforcement of the law and its repeal is presented? Evidently there

It cannot be found in the record written by the American people since the establishment of the Republic that they have deliberately turned back or retraced their steps after undertaking any great constructive task. They have nothing in common with the advocates of lawlessness and anarchy, or with those who by craft and persistence seek the nullification of the law.

No one suspects that the federal prosecutor has told the enforcing officers, the sheriffs, or the police, anything that they did not already know. But he has, by his direct testimony, brought to the serious attention of the citizens of the State of Massachusetts facts which may surprise and arouse them. There is no doubt that a large majority of the people everywhere favor the law and desire to see it enforced. The choice remains with them whether the law shall be enforced or whether it shall be violated and the safety of society be at the mercy of the

Flying Out of One Day's News

DERHAPS only in aviation can one day's grist of news record so many leaps of progress. Even while Capt. Frank Hawks and Oscar E. Grubb were whisking across the United States in eighteen hours and twenty-two minutes for a new transcontinental speed mark, the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aviation was making public its summary of aviation's forward strides during the year, Lindbergh was trail-breaking for the Panama air mail, and the Department of Commerce was announcing that the United States had doubled its export of airplanes during 1928.

The extent to which the airplane is conquering the weather is possibly the most striking and encouraging feature of both the Hawks flight and the Guggenheim report. From New Mexico to West Virginia, Captain Hawks drove his monoplane through fog and sleet at a 200-milesan-hour clip, overcoming wind and storm, to find his goal at New York without mishap, testifying to the excellence of his instruments as well as to his skill. The Guggenheim Fund has turned from popularizing aviation to promotion of mechanical progress, with particular emphasis on the perfection of equipment that will inaugurate the day of the "weatherproof plane." To this end it has given $1,200,000 to six universities for experimental purposes, and is backing more adequate weather reporting, the "signposting" of town names on roofs, and extensive tests of altimeters and other fog-defying devices.

It is work such as this and flights like that of Captain Hawks which, combined, have made possible the statement given out in connection with the report of the fund by its president, Harry F. Guggenheim: "Probably the outstanding aeronautical achievement of 1928 was the demonstration by private enterprise that air transport can be made a profitable business without government subsidy."

The Universal Boy

MONG the complex manifestations of A present-day civilization the critic surely occupies an honorable, if somewhat unenviable, place. In the world of art, theater, and literature his position has become so impregnable that no artist, actor, or writer desires to incur his disfavor. The time has passed when Shelley could dismiss the reviewer with a contemptuous phrase. No poet or, for that matter, film producer, would today so light-heartedly relegate him to the vulgar throng of unsuccessful aspirants for fame.

It may, therefore, come as a not altogether disagreeable shock to the innumerable sufferers from the critic's lash, to learn that there exists even now a large and, to the favored few. lucrative field of literary endeavor, where no reviewer has ever been known to loiter. It is the literature devoted to the amusement and instruction of boys: for, although boys are avid readers, they have never yet been deterred by a critic's frown. Their instincts alone guide them in the choice of their authors. But that this freedom from the shackles of professional criticism does not make the task of the writer for the juvenile market any the easier is revealed by Herbert Strang, a nom de plume that hides the identity of two collaborators, the heads of the juvenile department of the Oxford | the West to New Orleans.

University Press, who, as authors, are great favorites with their extremely exacting young reading public.

The modern boy, these specialists of the literary tastes of the rising generation declare, is a most difficult problem for his author, for he no longer allows himself to be thrilled by oldfashioned adventures among savages. Of the favorite authors of the old generation Jules Verne alone is still popular, and that because he forecasts developments of mechanical science, which have not yet been achieved. The most up-to-date inventions must be made to yield up their bags of thrills, if a modern author is to be successful, and woe to him who is caught tripping over a formula or is found out to have committed the sin of lagging behind the times! No critic, however developed his taste for nipping literary reputations in the bud, can be so crushing in his opprobrium as a boy whose suspicions have been aroused by too obvious a slip. This, no doubt, is the result of the boy's absolute confidence in his author, which it is impossible to shake with impunity. The boy who wrote to the editor of the Boys' Own Paper, an English schoolboys' journal whose jubilee has just been celebrated in London by a distinguished gathering of its old. readers, to ask what was the least cost of an expedition by airplane to either the north or south pole for one man and one dog, has given a valuable tip to his author. For such ingenuousness is not only admirable in disclosing the trend of thought of the universal boy. It also lays bare the extreme perils which beset an author who undertakes to satisfy the boy's imaginative cravings.

Just Eggs!

WAS it the loquacious Sam Weller who said "eggs is eggs"? The distinction may have been fine enough when breakfasts were leisurely, and standardization had never a thought of entering the poultry business. But it will not do now, for England has put its eggs into three classes: special, minimum weight 21/2 ounces; standard, 2 ounces; and pullet standard, 134 ounces. Nor is that all. The new system of grading bars preserved eggs, and demands that the shells of fresh eggs be clean and sound, the volk translucent, and the air space less than one-quarter inch in depth.

The obvious benefit to the consumer needs no emphasis. He will get the egg of weight and quality he pays for. No longer will he be baffled by distinctions, in not a few cases imaginary. And no longer, on the other hand, will the grocer be at the mercy of the woman who, having called for "black hens'" eggs and being told by the grocer that he did not know a black hen's egg from any other colored hen's egg, asked if she might pick them out herself. "It seems to me," said the grocer, as he watched her do so, "that the black hens lay all the big eggs." "Yes," answered the woman, "that's the way I tell them."

Then, too, the consumer will cease to puzzle, as many a man has done in America, over descriptions in the grocer's window:

Eggs, guaranteed, 75 cents a dozen Eggs, fresh, 70 cents Eggs, fancy western, 55 cents Eggs, 35 cents.

Eggs, unadorned, apparently are in the habit of striking a poor market. Or are they unadorned because they have nothing special to be proud of? At any rate, if the new system spreads, advantages will accrue to all. It will help maintain strict standards in advertising. It will assist the merchant in strengthening the dependability placed upon the goods he sells. And it will mean much for the poultry raiser, who has perhaps suffered most through lack of some such system of grading. Above all, it will protect the consumer who not infrequently gets an egg so small that he can barely escape feeling that he is looking at it through the wrong end of a telescope.

Editorial Notes

A progressive step toward keeping the proper balance between studies and athletics was taken by the University of Pennsylvania athletic officials when they decided to limit freshmen to competition in one sport and upper classmen to two unless they proved themselves particularly competent in the classroom. If the students meet the authorities halfway, the action should not result in fewer letter winners but in more scholarship.

Aviators, who have long made a study of birds in flight as a means of perfecting aircraft, have taken another lesson from our feathered friends, who often carry seeds many miles before dropping them where they spring up in new locations. Recently a 1000-acre field in Oregon was successfully seeded from the air, at a third of the expense of hand seeding, an excellent stand of grass being obtained.

Looked upon as an innovation, the first sixteen floors of the forty-story Union Trust Building in Detroit will have windows that never open, outside air being barred, and the interior being kept at an even temperature of 70 degrees by a special ventilating system. Many commuters, however, will claim that the railroads adopted the nonopening window years ago.

Of late years many people have become accustomed to having many things done while they wait: shoes resoled; hats blocked; cars washed; stockings mended; photographs printed; but a traveler to Greenland writes of a house built while he waited. The Eskimos made him an igloo of snow with all the comforts of a home, in no time at all!

The statement of the president of the National Music Teachers' Association that radio is causing the disappearance of jazz, reminds one of the old saying, "Continual dropping wears away a stone." .

Great transportation systems, millions of factories, storage systems of every kind, distributing centers constantly active and busy, besides thousands upon thousands of bookkeeping machines are at work in that socalled quiet retreat.

The transportation systems alone are enough to make a wondrous volume. Raw materials are obtained from the air and from the soil. The tiny root hairs take in such material as they deem fit, and this material is carried up to the leaves by a system of channels and a power not yet fully explained. There it meets other raw material which has been drawn in from the air, and the factory is spontaneously under headway as soon as the sun is up.

The manufactured product is then taken back to the roots to feed them, and the provisions made for transporting this are so orderly and so protected against traffic iams that they are worthy of the study of every great business in the commercial world.

Not only when you walk into the woods are you in the midst of millions of factories and gigantic transportation systems, each of which is growing and expanding each day, but you are also witnessing a bookkeeping systema record of past growth, a record of years and months wherein raw material has been abundant and easily obtained, and years wherein it has not been so, a record of vacations and rest, so that when a log of whatever size is sawed, you can tell its age and history at a glance.

This tremendous commercial section has not lost sight of beautifying the factory sites. The plan is entirely co-operative; not only is it co-operative within itself each cell doing its work and receiving its remuneration but it furnishes homes and protection for thousands of animals and insects, nesting places for birds, and resting places for man. Compare the growing of timber and the distribution of exactly the same amount of wood and lumber by the commercial world. The factory site of the former is sought by bird, man and beast, but not many seek a lumber mill or railroad shops as a place for recreation and comfort and beauty. The tree is valuable from the time it peeps above the soil until the time its ash is used for fertilizer, whether that comes directly from burning the tree as wood or whether it has served for years and years in buildings to be returned ultimately in one form or another to the soil to nourish in turn the future forests.

Intelligence, harmonious activity, discernment, dis-crimination, co-operation, co-ordination, power, service, grace, beauty, economic efficiency, majesty, are all mani-

The remuneration system in a tree is a story in itself. Suffice it here to say that not only does it care for and support its employees, but its employees' descendants for many generations. It sends some of them into distant fields by water routes and air routes, and provides for the establishment of these foreign branches by sending within each seed the full understanding of all transportation systems and efficiency plans to be incorporated into. the initial installment and its future development.

This is but a sketch of what is really happening around those of us who go into the woods.

Bells, Joys and Sorrows

THE people of Croatia are consecrating new church bells! Croatia is thickly dotted with villages and above every village mounts a high, slender steeple. They have been there for decades and other steeples before them through the centuries. And in the steeples have been bells, which have called the young and old of many generations to sing hymns of thanksgiving and offer up prayers of supplication. But during the World War up prayers of supplication. But during the World War those bells were molded into cannon, and only now are the last of them being restored.

And when a new bell is cast and put up, that is no ordinary act. It is an event of great solemnity in which the whole community takes part as at a wedding, registering its approval and assent. And, as at a wedding, so here there must be a "koum," who is something between a best man and a godfather. The "koum" of a newly married couple is a sort of uncle and has much responsi bility for the welfare of the new family. So close is the relation that the children of a "koum" may not marry the children of a couple which he "koums." Probably the "koum" of a new bell has special responsibility for the church and the welfare of the community.

Be that as it may, it is a great honor for a community to invite you to be a "koum" to its new bell. Stephan Raditch, the late Croatian peasant leader, has "koumed" many bells in Croatian villages, and recently, when the two new bells were put up in the town of Gradets, Dr. Vlatko Machek, Raditch's successor, and another peasant leader, George Kurnevitch, were invited to be koums.

They arrived by train at 10 o'clock and were met at the station by a multitude of people from Gradets and neighboring villages. The town choir greeted them with a song. Then a procession started from the station to the church. First came the horse guards, then the members of the athletic society with their bright red shirts, their sport caps tipped with hawks' feathers and their buff trousers; later the school children, then a wagon with the big half-ton bell and another wagon with the smaller bell; after that the two koums, followed by the choir, the city council, the local chamber of commerce and a long line of the common people.

The head of the procession reached an arch made of green boughs and flowers, and they all stopped while the Mayor made a little speech of welcome. Then they went on to a second arch and stopped for two maidens to present the koums with flowers. After that they went to the church and the bells were mounted. On the big one is the inscription: "In commemoration of the martyred leader of the Croatian people, Stephan Raditch." In front of the church, on a high stand, Dr. Machek, the president of the Croatian Peasant Party, made a short speech in which he said: Friends and brothers, men and women from the villages of Croatia! It is strange that there are good-sized children here among us who have never yet heard the sound of a bell from your church. But they must not suppose that we have never had bells. We've had them for centuries and centuries. Our bells have called us to pray, to work and to rest. And how joyfully they have sung on Christmas eves and on Easter morns!

rest. And now joystanty they are seen and seen and on Easter morns!

Our bells have shared all our joys and sorrows. They have increased our happiness and lessened our grief. But at times they have been silent. Our nation has now passed through a long, silent week. It has endured for ten full years, during which we have not been given our rights in our new kingdom. But it is coming to an end. The silence will be broken. Our people have been aroused and awakened. And we shall sing songs of gladness. Our bells, these new bells, will peal with tidings of Liberty and Righteousness. They will sing "Hosanna to the Highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, Hosanna to my people!"

R. H. M. and on Easter morns!

From the World's Great Capitals-London

WHEN the Duke and Duchess of York returned Duchess found among the correspondence awaiting her, a letter from a little girl. This was read at a dinner recently by the Duke's private secretary. It ran

I am only nine years old and I want to ask you a question. I want to be a Princess and marry a Royal Duke, like you did. Do tell me how it is done. I should love to be Prince, it must be such fun, and Mummy says a Prince's loes a lot of good.

History does not relate the Duchess's reply. The letter was quoted in connection with the fact that a royal princess was the hard-working chairman of a league which was holding its annual commemoration dinner. 1 1 1

The names of 5,000,000 women in Britain between the ages of twenty-one and thirty are now being added to the list of those entitled to vote at the coming general election. Many who are between the ages named are asking themselves, "Am I one of those upon whom this privilege has been conferred and if so in what constituency can I vote?" The answer is simple. A woman between the ages of twenty-one and thirty can vote in a constituency, if she has resided there continuously from September 1 to December 1. (In Scotland from September 15 to December 15.) She can also do so if either she or her husband has business premises within the area for which the candidate to be elected stands.

The expression, "a footnote to history," is often used in a general and more or less intangible sense. A recent paragraph in the London press probably comes nearer deserving that title with complete accuracy than most paragraphs thus defined. On the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first airplane flight by the Wright brothers the occasion was fittingly commemorated by various gatherings in London, but the following lines from the newspapers of the following day doubtless meant more than the columns of speeches reported from the various dinners and meetings:

Yesterday, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first flight in a power-driven airplane, an Armstrong-Siddeley air liner of Imperial Airways flew from London to Paris in 105 minutes, reaching Paris forty-five minutes ahead schedule time. The machine carried twenty-one people, a averaged for the 225 miles a speed of 130 miles an hour. 1 1 1

A determined British matron has just set a knotty problem for the railway authorities. Above the door of every railway carriage in England is a chain which stops the train when pulled. It is meant for use only on very rare occasions of emergency. Below it is the somewhat cryptic inscription: "To stop the train pull down the chain. Penalty for improper use £5." This is understood to mean that frivolous resort to the chain costs the passenger a five-pound note. At Banbury a British matron bought a penny bun. She tendered sixpence to the vendor on the platform, but the train went on before she received the change. She promptly pulled the chain. When the train came to a standstill and an excited guard rushed to the carriage to see what was the matter, he was told placidly that she wanted her change. Now the bun vendor plies his trade only by permission of the railway, which might therefore conceivably be held to be responsible for the change that failed to materialize. The question thus arises—was the matron within her rights?

The regulation passed into law in 1918 and brought into force by government notification issued last November, whereby British voters are required under a penalty that may amount to £20 to register, has not been allowed to become a dead letter. A picturesque test case has just come up at Kingston, near London, and has resulted in the imposition of a fine of £2 with £1 costs upon a woman who refused to give the particulars required. The facts were not disputed. The first form supplied was burnt because, as the accused said, "I didn't understand what it meant, and could not bother myself about the vote, and preferred to leave it to men who know more about politics than I do." The door was slammed in the face of the official who called with a duplicate, because at that moment "the milk on the kitchen fire boiled over."

The voice of King George V is to be preserved for future generations. A gramophone record of his speech at the opening of the new Tyne Bridge has been issued for circulation. A copy of it is also to be kept in the British Museum, London. King George has a remarkably clear and pleasant voice, not unlike that of his eldest son, the Prince of Wales. At the Coronation Durbar at Delhi, where he addressed 50,000 people before the days of loudspeaking apparatus, he was heard by numbers of those too far off for the words of any of the other speakers to reach them.

A delightful example of the humanizing effect of sport was given in a letter from China, published recently in the Daily Mail here. The writer is one of the crew of a British gunboat stationed on the upper Yangtze-kiang River. His letter was dated from Wan-hsien, where there was serious trouble in 1926 between the British and the local Chinese ruler, General Yang-sen, culminating in a bombardment by the former. Since then, the writer stated, there has been very grave anti-British feeling among the civil and military population here, and a boycott has been kept up against British shipping and especially His Majesty's gunboats." This state of affairs was ended by the simple fact that the Chinese and British both happened to be very keen on football. After some initial difficulties a match was arranged for Armistice Day between the cadets of the Chinese Military College and a team from the gunboat Peterel. The next step was the presentation of a silver challenge cup by the officers and men of the Peterel to be competed for by teams from British gunboats and teams from Wan-hsien. This was played for on November 22, when the two elevens were diplomatic enough to draw.

A Fruitage of Twenty Years

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Twenty years ago on the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, a number of citizens prominent in the life of the Nation, shocked by a dreadful race riot at Springfield, Ill., Lincoln's home, signed a call imploring Americans to devote themselves to an intelligent and concerted effort to bring about a better understanding between the races in harmony with the ideals of the Great Emancipator with a view to averting such tragedies in the future. In the twenty years since that call was issued, the small committee then formed has grown into a national body, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, with 350 branches in forty-five states. That the twenty years' work of this body has borne fruit in increased opportunity for the Negro, and in better and more informed public opinion is everywhere recognized.

There is not space here to itemize a work twenty years long and ramifying into every phase of the country's life. Suffice it to say that the campaign of the associa-tion for open-mindedness and fact-finding, its five vic-tories before the United States Supreme Court, establishing ideals vital to all American citizens, and its practical demonstration of harmonious and intelligent co-operation between white and colored people for the common good, have not alone constituted a vital contribution to the America of today, but have heartened innumerable individuals and organizations, north and south, striving for peace and justice as between the races.

This year the branches of the National Association to the Advancement of Colored People in many cities of the country are planning Lincoln's birthday dinners at which prominent members of both races may meet to plan for the carrying on and extension of this work. We are taking the liberty of calling this event to the attention of your readers in the hope that they may be moved to participate sympathetically in this twentieth anniversary celebration of a work so vital to true Americanism.
